Advice from the Specialist

| Main causes of leaks | Solutions | Tips |
|---|---|---|
| Broken, cracked or split bowl | Cast iron or steel trough: replace the bowl with a new one.Polyethylene trough: can be repaired by salvaging material from the rim of the trough or from LA BUVETTE and working the material with a heat gun without blackening it. | Watch the video on www.labuvette-waterers.co.uk/communication/advice/videos-tutorials |
| Excessive water pressure | Make sure you use nozzles suited to the supply pressure (> or < 1bar).Change the valve seals (constant level) or the nozzles (pushers).Avoid night-time pressure peaks by installing an industrial-grade A406 pressure reducer. | Note that reducing the opening of the main supply tap reduces the flow rate but not the pressure, and therefore does not solve the problem. |
| Faulty connection seals | If there are no flat seals or O-rings, make watertight connections in accordance with good practice, using sealing paste or bead. | Slightly scratch the threads of the male fitting at right angles with a hacksaw to prevent your joint from turning when you screw on the female fitting. |
| Defective drain seals | Check for dirt.Replace the seal with a new one if necessary. | Foam gaskets (1091036) for large 'THERMOLAC' type drains that have been flattened will re-inflate in a few hours in the open air. After each draining, use a re-inflated gasket and keep the flattened gasket in reserve. You can use it again for the next oil change once it has regained its shape. |
| Faulty tap seals | Check that the valve seal is intact and that there are no chips or sand (new installation) or limescale. Replace the gasket with a new one if necessary.If the seal on the red type F11/FORSTAL/STALCHO2 nozzle is damaged, check that the supply pressure is less than 4 bar and replace the nozzle with a new one. We also recommend replacing the filter cap (1090757). | Install a 100µ minimum filter at the head of the line and bleed the pipes before fitting the drinkers.If your drinker has a T-fitting and you only use one inlet, seal the plug with paste or coated cord, which is more durable than the O-ring supplied as standard. |
| Float pierced or cracked | Replace the float with a new one. | Watch the video on www.labuvette-waterers.co.uk/communication/advice/videos-tutorials |
| Float pin bent out of place | Check that the black plastic clip which keeps the pin in place and keeps it working properly is still in place. Replace the pin and/or clip with a new one if necessary. | Watch the video on www.labuvette-waterers.co.uk/communication/advice/videos-tutorials |
| Flow adjustment screw cracked (push-tube valve bowl drinker) by frost damage | Replace the adjusting screw with a new one coated with silicone grease. | Watch the video on www.labuvette-waterers.co.uk/communication/advice/videos-tutorials |
| Float valve wobbles or 'bounces' without being able to stop | Replace the tap with a JUMBO model. This is fitted with a patented anti-oscillation system that stops the pipes resonating. | Watch the video on www.labuvette-waterers.co.uk/communication/advice/videos-tutorials |
| Twisted push tube. | Replace any damaged parts, then check the flow rate and good access for the animals (sufficient clearance above the trough). | Increase the flow rate and/or install an A341 or A342 tap protector. |

Providing a local service

At LA BUVETTE®, we are convinced that a product without service has no future, which is why we offer so many spare parts available quickly and high-quality technical support.

1 Design your point of sale

A LA BUVETTE shelf is easy to spot. The products and all the essential information about them are easily accessible.
Your LA BUVETTE representative will be happy to provide you with a customised solution to meet your breeders' needs.

2 Use our website

If you haven't already done so, add the LA BUVETTE website to your favourites! By simply browsing through the product ranges, you'll be able to quickly find the technical solution that's best suited to your needs.

Identifying a spare part and its price is also extremely quick and easy. Each product page contains a link to its exploded view as well as a 'compatible references' section listing all the spare parts available for this product.

All the exploded views are freely downloadable and printable (pdf format) in the dedicated section.

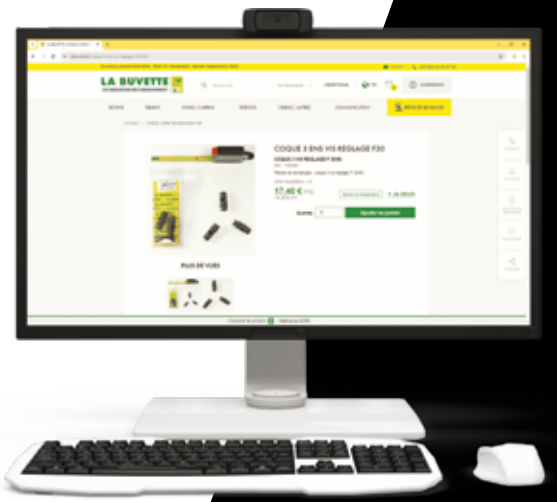

Our experts remain naturally at your disposal by phone: +33 (0)3 24 52 37 20.

3 Parts for older models

LA BUVETTE offers a wide range of spare parts for its older models, some of which have been out of production for several decades. Exploded views of our older models are freely available on our website.
